

Healthy habits disappear

- less or no exercise
- eating habits commonly get worse → food is very accessible

Common dorm illnesses / "freshman flu" as students try to build immunity.

different living conditions

new routines = less sleep

- getting used to a different lifestyle takes time and leads to mental strain
 - all of this on-top of a new and higher level of education
- ↓ stress + feeling overwhelmed

What does all of this promote?

over the counter medication use

(pain killers, drowsy medication)

↓
could possibly be dangerous because it's unmonitored

"Sick of being sick? Here's how to avoid viruses in college"

Article that discusses reasoning behind the "Frat Flu"

"The Frat Flu: A price that may come with partying"

discussion on how socialization leads to common illness

Sleep, eating, and stress patterns shift in the weeks that college students are returning back to school which dramatically affects their physical + mental health.

- Why does almost everyone seem to get sick in the early months of school?

- why does stress/mental strain make people physically sick?

Sleep schedules collapse in the early weeks of college

Healthy habits disappear

- less or no exercise
- eating habits commonly get worse → food is very accessible

Common dorm illnesses / "freshman flu" as students try to build immunity.

different living conditions

new routines = less sleep

- getting used to a different lifestyle takes time and leads to mental strain
- all of this on-top of a new and higher level of education

↓ stress + feeling overwhelmed

What does all of this promote?

over the counter medication use

(pain killers, drowsy medication)

↓
could possibly be dangerous because it's unmonitored

Sleep schedules collapse in the early weeks of college

Sleep, eating, and stress patterns shift in the weeks that college students are returning back to school which dramatically affects their physical + mental health.

- Why does almost everyone seem to get sick in the early months of school?
- why does stress/mental strain make people physically sick?

Healthy habits disappear

- less or no exercise
- eating habits: commonly get worse → food is very accessible

Common down illnesses / "freshman flu" as students try to build immunity.

different living conditions

new routines = less sleep

- getting used to a different lifestyle takes time and leads to mental strain
- all of this on-top of a new and higher level of education

↓ stress + feeling overwhelmed

What does all of this promote?

over the counter medication use

(pain killers, drowsy medication)

↓
could possibly be dangerous because its unmonitored

Sleep schedules collapse in the early weeks of college